VOL. XXVIII.---NO. 300.

ALEXANDRIA, VA., THURSDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 30, 1897.

PRICE 2 CTS.

No matter how much of a business woman a woman may be, when the little love and makes up his mind to shoot, there is no protection against his arrow. Yet many a young woman whose affections are already engaged, hesitates to assume the obligations of wifehood and motherhood, because she feels unfitted for them by some physical weakness or disease.

The special ailments to which the feminine organism is liable, not only unfit a woman for happy wifehood and motherhood, but incapacitate her for any sphere of action. No woman can discharge the daily duties of any position with comfort or satisfaction who is constantly weighed down by headaches, backaches and dragging, weakening drains.

Troubles of this nature are not by any means a necessity of womanhood. They are positively and completely cured by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It imparts genuine health and strength to the womanly organs. It was devised for this one purpose by an eminent specialist in this particular field of practice.

"For several years I suffered with prolapsus of the uterus," writes Miss A. Lee Schuster, of Box 12, Rodney, Jefferson Co., Miss. "Our family physician treated me for kidney trouble, and everything else but the right thing. I grew weaker and worse. My body was emaciated, hands and feet clammy and cold, stomach weak, with great palpitation of the heart. I dreaded for night to come for I would suffer with nausea all night and so to continue until some kind of relief was obtained. I took your book with a marked page. I began taking your 'Favorite Prescription,' contrary to my family's wishes, and I began to improve right away. I have taken three bottles and now I am very nearly well and am very happy, and thankful to you."

Gleanings from our Colonial History.

NO. 6
POCAHONTAS THE DUSKY MAIDEN AND PRINCESS (Concluded).

The Indian wife Pocahontas soon became a general favorite with the colonists at Jamestown and readily fell into their civilized ways. She was christened Rebecca and duly instructed in the English language and the doctrines of the church. In 1616 she sailed from Virginia with her husband for England, where, as the daughter of an Indian king, she was received with great enthusiasm and solicitude, and everywhere entertained with becoming marks of respect. "Lord and Lady Delaware presented her at court, and 'divers courtiers and others' who saw her declared that they had seen many English ladies worse favored, proportioned and behaved." The grotesque distortions of a savage maid were exchanged for the jewels, silks and laces of a court lady, and we are told that she "did not only accustom herself to civility, but still carried herself as the daughter of a king, and was accordingly respected."

By princes she was received as a princess, and by the dignitaries of the church she was welcomed as the first fruits of missionary effort in the new world. The Lord Bishop of London entertained her at his palace with "festival, state and pomp." In the rich apparel she fed a lady of rank and fashion she sat for her portrait. Costly presents were bestowed upon her, and at the theatres she possessed no flatterer's adulations of which she was the object. All of this time Master Rolfe seems to have sunk entirely into the background and to have shone only by reflected light. But all the homage and flattery which Pocahontas received could not impair the simplicity of the "Guardian Angel of Virginia" nor make her forgetful of old friends.

Her meeting with Captain Smith, after years of separation, upon British soil and amid her grand surroundings, was beautiful and touching. Before leaving for New England the bold adventurer went to see her and "addressed her with a modest salutation," besting, as he thought, her rank, whereupon she turned from him and covered her face, "not seeming well contented." Captain Smith was amazed and "repented him." Her warm heart was wounded at his formal greeting. She recalled her girlhood in Virginia, the circumstances of his preservation in the wilderness and all other circumstances of their old time friendship, and insisted upon calling him "father," of which he says "though I would have excused I durst not allow of that title, because she was a king's daughter." She would have her way, however, and to the captain's remonstrance made answer: "You were not afraid to come into my father's country, and caused fear to him and all his people but me, and do you fear now that I should call you father? I tell you then I will and shall call me child, and so I will be forever and ever your countryman."

When early in the year 1617 Captain Argall, the same who had bought our princess with a copper kettle, was ready to return to Virginia as a deputy governor of the colony Rolfe and Pocahontas were to sail with him and arrangements were made for their accommodation on the admiral's ship, but this wild flower of America was destined never to see her native woods again. At the age of twenty-two she fell a victim of the English climate and was buried "in ye chancel" at the church at Gravesend. Her husband, Master Rolfe, who had been appointed secretary and recorder general of the colony, sailed as he had planned for Virginia, and her little son Thomas, whom she dearly loved, was left in England, where he lived with his uncle, Henry Rolfe, until he had completed his education. He then cast his lot with the colonists in Virginia and became there a man of wealth and prominence. He married a Miss Poythress and had one child, Jane, who married Colonel Robert Bolling.

A few of the names of those who claim descent in direct line from Pocahontas through her granddaughter, Jane Bolling, are as follows: Bolling, Randolph, Gay, Eldridge, Murray, Whittle, Cary, Page, Blair, Meade, Kennon, Bond, Walke, Robertson, Cabell, West, Elmes, Wiley, Archer, Dickens, Smith, Fairfax Fisher, Staudard, Morris, Stewart Knickel, McPhail Coleman and Williams.

Of John Rolfe, William Wirt Henry in an able address before the Virginia Historical Society, in which he successfully vindicated the veracity of John Smith, the virtue of Pocahontas, and the honesty of Rolfe, says: "He was one of the most active persons of his time in developing the resources of the infant colony. He will be ever remembered in history, however, as the husband of Pocahontas, who, born the daughter of a savage king, was endowed with all the graces of character which became a christian princess, where was the first of her people to embrace christianity and to unite in marriage with the English race, who, like a guardian angel, watched over and served the infant colony which developed into a great people, among whom her own descendants have ever been conspicuous for true nobility, and whose names will be honored by a grateful posterity."

Household Gods.

The ancient Greeks believed that the Penates were the gods who attended to the welfare and prosperity of the family. They were worshipped as household gods in every home. The household god of to-day is Dr. King's New Discovery. For consumption, coughs, colds and for all affections of Throat, Chest and Lungs it is invaluable. It has been tried for a quarter of a century and is guaranteed to cure, or money returned. No household should be without this good angel. It is pleasant to take and a safe and sure remedy for old and young. Free trial bottles at E. L. Allen's Drug Store. Regular size 50 c. and $1.00.

Don't be persuaded into buying liniments without reputation or merit—Chamberlain's Pain Balm costs no more, and its merits have been proven by a test of many years. Such letters as the following from L. G. Bagley, Hueneme, Cal., are constantly being received: "The best remedy for pain I have ever used is Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and I say so after having used it in my family for several years." It cures rheumatism, lame back, sprains and swellings. For sale by J. H. Janney, Druggist, 701 King street.

It Will Surprise You.

In order to prove the great merit of Ely's Cream Balm, the most effective cure for a Tarr and Cold in the Head, your druggist will supply a generous 10 cent trial size or we will mail for 10 cents. Full size 50 cents.

E. L. BROTHERS,
56 Warren Street, New York City.

Ely's Cream Balm has completely cured me of catarrh when everything else failed. Many acquaintances have used it with excellent results.—Alfred W. Stevens, Caldwell, Ohio.
